The Importance of the Early Church

The Early Church period (c.100–500 AD) saw the clarification and formulation of the essential Christian doctrines accepted by all mainstream churches today.

But besides being occupied with doctrinal issues, the leading figures of the Church of the time were also engaged in taking the teaching passed on by the first apostles and working out its implications for the culture in which they found themselves.

The study of the events & people of the Early Church period is, therefore, not merely of academic interest, but can also provide inspiration for us in the continuing task of wrestling with the message of Christ in contemporary society.

This course is one of a series aiming to introduce some of the major people and events from Early Church history to a wider audience, especially to those with no previous background in the subject. You'll find the presentation style informal but clear, the coffee fairly traded, and the biscuits rather nice...

The main EarlyChurch.co.uk focus in 2007 is the three important fourth-century Cappadocian Fathers.

If you'd like to be notified of new courses as they're scheduled, you can use the "Stay in Touch" feature on the EarlyChurch.co.uk website (see overleaf).

An Introduction to St Basil the Great

Saturday 27th January

St Basil "the Great" (c.330 – 379) received a classical education (partly alongside St Gregory of Nazianzus), after which his sister Macrina persuaded him to abandon a promising career in public speaking in favour of the ascetic life.

After touring the monastic centres of the day (in Syria, Palestine and Egypt) he established his own community in Cappadocia and was influential in the organisation of the growing monastic movement of his day.

Basil's abilities were noticed by Eusebius the bishop of Caesarea, who appointed him as his assistant. Basil's rise in ecclesiastical circles continued with his ordination as priest, and eventually to his succeeding Eusebius as bishop. He became an astute and able politician in both ecclesiastical and secular spheres, and used his influence to vigorously champion the poor, as well as upholding the Nicene faith against Arian opposition.

The course will outline the life and work of St Basil the Great. We will touch upon his influence on monasticism, involvement in social welfare, and role in the Arian controversy. We will also consider his theological contribution through such important works as On the Holy Spirit, which played an important role in the 4th century formation of the doctrine of the Trinity.

Course Structure

The course will be divided into several sessions, with breaks for refreshments, each session consisting of a period of teaching with time for questions. There will also be a break at midday for lunch and time for reflection in the convent grounds.

Excerpts from St Basil's writings will be provided as handouts on the day, the intention being not merely to provide stock quotations, but rather inspirational texts - "catalysts" for your own spiritual journey.

Who is the course aimed at?

Anyone who's read this far and is still interested! A complete lack of previous experience or study is assumed, although clergy, lay readers or others with some knowledge will still find much of interest.

How much does the course cost?

The full cost is £15 per person, with a concessionary rate of £10 also available. Monks, nuns and anyone else attending in full habit gets in for free...

Lunch

Please bring a packed lunch.

Speaker

Russell Jefford holds an MA in Patristics (Early Church history), is an Associate of All Hallows, and sees much in the writings of the Early Church Fathers which is inspirational and of relevance to contemporary Christianity.
